A Brave Female Pilot

In 1930, aeroplanes were very small. They only flew short distances. The pilots were very brave. Amy Johnson was the brave lady pilot. She was the first person to fly alone from London in England to Darwin in Australia.

When she was near Yangon in Myanmar, it was raining very heavily. She could see only clouds. She came very low. In Yangon there was no airport. There was a long stretch of grassy land used for horse races. It was the only place for landing an aero plane. Amy looked and looked. She couldn't see the racecourse. She had no more petrol! "I must land" she thought. She saw a small piece of grass. She saw people waving. She came down. It was a campus football field. The plane hit a goal-post and went into a hole. The wings were broken. Amy was so sad. Now she couldn't reach Australia.

But the students helped her. They used their shirts and mended the wings. They borrowed a fire engine. They put the aero plane on top of the fire engine and took it to the race-course. It looked funny. But on Friday 16, May 1930, Amy took off from the race-course. She had many more adventures. On 24 May, 1930, her little plane arrived in Darwin, Australia. Well done Amy.
