Our Rituals and Festivals

Sonam Gurung reads in class four. Today he is getting his hair cut. The hair cut is not an ordinary act. It is a kind of celebration, so he has invited his friends. They came and sat in a queue to enjoy the feast. Durga asked Sonam, "What do you do when you get your hair cut? I could not get to see and know about it. Please explain."

Parmeshwor Yadav said, "Listen! Sonam was taken to a shed yesterday. As per horoscope, a man was assigned to cut Sonam's hair. The hair afterwards was put on the basket and cast in the river. Dancing and singing went throughout the night. This morning, maternal uncle gave him gifts and new clothes. The hair cut is followed by giving of gifts.

Dhan Bahadur Tamang said, "I have also got my hair cut." Like you the people of Tharu and Sherpa community get their hair cut. Brahmins and Kshetris do the ritual of Bratabandha after their hair cut. Chhewar (getting the hair cut) is a ritual. People perform several other rituals from birth to death. These rituals differ from one caste and religion to another. We should respect other people's rituals, traditions and festivals.

Durga said, "My maternal home is in Baitadi district. Gaura festival is special there. In this festival, they pray, eat delicious foods and sing Deuda (a kind of dancing and singing celebration). Sonam's maternal uncle said, "Look! People of various castes live in our country. They have their own traditions and festivals. let me tell you about some festivals celebrated in Nepal.

Father's Day and Mother's Day

According to Hindu tradition, a festival of taking a visit of mother falls on Krishna Aunsi of Baishakh. Krishna Aunsi of Bhadra similar festival of taking a visit of father is celebrated. Children give gifts and delicious foods to their parents. Those with no mother go to Matatirtha. Those with no father go to Gorkarna where they offer money and gods to gods after bath. Those who cannot go there offer money and foods at home.

Siruwa Festival

This festival is celebrated by Rajbansi people on 1st of Baishakh in Jhapa and Morang districts. It is celebrated by Spraying water and color with each other and service of delicious foods to relatives. The festival brings relatives closer to feel a sense of togetherness. It binds people to strong relation.
