Preface

The aim of developing and revising the school curricula and textbooks is to make education purposeful, relevant and functional. Education should impart the desired knowledge and skills to the students. Apart from this, it should instil in them values and moral standards such as nationalistic feelings, discipline, self-reliance and basic functional skills of language, maths, science, information and health. Along with these, students are expected to appreciate arts, tolerance among different languages, religions and cultures. In relation to this, there has been an increasing demand for English to start at the beginning of primary education. To meet this demand, the government decided to introduce English as a subject from Grade One, starting in the academic year 2003.

The present English textbook for Grade Two contains the materials that give children enjoyable activities for learning English. Language skills are introduced systematically throughout this book, focusing particularly on listening and speaking skills for this grade. It is believed that the lessons and exercises given in the book will give children enough opportunities for practising different language skills. It is equally true that the book in itself is not adequate to achieve its set goals unless there is an active teaching and learning environment. Hence, it is expected that the teachers will follow the instructions given in this book. This book, originally written by Pramod Kumar Shah, Krishna Raj Hamal and Dev Narayan Mukhiya has been edited by the Curriculum Development Centre. Art editing of this book was done by Shreehari Shrestha by making it four colour. Curriculum Development Centre would like to thank the members of English Subject Committee and other subject experts for their help in developing this book.

Generally a textbook is an important tool for teaching and learning. It is expected that experienced teachers and enthusiastic students can achieve the learning outcomes of the curriculum by using this book along with various other resource materials. In practice, a textbook is used and considered as the main resource material. Therefore, attempts have been made to bring this book up to the standard. Teachers, parents, students and all concerned stakeholders are requested to send their constructive suggestions to improve this book in the future editions.
